

MILITARY ALLIANCE HAS HAD ROUGH SLEDDING IN EUROPE

Complexities of Organization Has Deterred Real Progress

FIRST YEAR "TRYING"

France Feels That Alliance Gives Britain Dominance

This is the fourth in a series of articles by International News Service Correspondent Lee Van Atta describing changing military concepts of America's European allies in the light of announced Russian detonation of an atomic bomb.

By Lee Van Atta

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent) PARIS, Nov. 19 — (INS) — The Western military alliance, hailed a year ago as the armed hope of Europe, has had rough sledding.

Although nearly every nation in it has felt the urgent need for a cohesive military front, the complexities of organization and the strident voices of nationalism have served so far to deter real progress.

Viscount Montgomery, supreme chief of the Western force, has privately referred to the first year as "very trying." This is generally considered an understatement.

Many in France feel the alliance has wed them to a situation in which they are dominated by Britain. Others believe that the insistence France provide thirty divisions of troops, with air and sea support to come from other sources and nations, makes France the most important of all partners in the alliance.

Whatever the basis for the complaint between partners, and some believe it is a personality clash at the top, impartial observers in Paris think it will be a "long time" before true unity and alliance is reached despite the progress made at the recent Big Three conference in the French capital.

The fact there has been disagreement in the alliance, however, has not slowed France's determination to point its national program toward a goal which will enable well-rounded defense in the atomic age.

For France, as much as England, feels keenly the nearness of the only real potential enemy in Europe or Asia.

France, like England, is hindered by a dire shortage of defense funds and by her own commitments abroad.

These include the struggle in Indo-China which has been a costly drain, and demands in Africa, which the French propose to develop as an even stronger secondary defense chain than they were able to weld during the last war.

But France, at home, is not yet convinced of the soundness of the overall plan for European defense as it affects her. The 30-division goal set up under the alliance program does not seem sufficient to the French without guaranteed, on-

STATE TO GET BIDS FOR HOUSING PROJECTS

First Five Projects Will Be Estimated December 15th

LOCATIONS ARE GIVEN

HARRISBURG, Nov. 19 — Secretary of Commerce Theodore Roosevelt, III, has announced that bids for the first five projects under the new State Housing Assistance Program will be received December 15 by the State Planning Board, of which he is chairman.

The housing projects will be located in Allentown, Bethlehem, Butler, Erie and Johnstown, and provide for the construction and operation of 849 additional dwelling units for rental purposes.

The bids will be for capital grants to produce rental housing at lower rents than would otherwise be possible. These grants will be paid from a $15,000,000 appropriation which the 1949 Legislature authorized as aid in production of additional rental dwellings for families of limited income. It is expected that the program will result in construction costing more than $50,000,000. These grants will be made by the State Planning Board with the Governor's approval.

Advertisements appearing in newspapers in the affected cities requested bids until 2 p. m., December 15, for the construction and operation of these State-assisted housing projects.

Harold W. Pierce Reminds Magistrates Such Can Happen in Penna.

A CO. SEAT SPEAKER

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 19 — Harold W. Pierce, adviser, Public Service Institute, Harrisburg, in addressing members of Bucks County Magistrates' Association, Thursday evening, warned that the same thing can happen here that happened in New Jersey. "Don't let the minor judiciary get away from you as happened in New Jersey," admonished the Harrisburg speaker. "People say dictatorship can't happen in America, but it can, and the centralizing of local government into state and state into national is one of the ways it can and does happen."

Mr. Pierce was present to urge the formation of a training school for the Bucks minor judiciary, and advised members to prepare themselves.

BOARD APPROVES SENIOR CLASS TRIP

Morrisville Class Will Have To Solve Racial Problem

PLAN GRID RALLY

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 19 — The Morrisville Board of Education last night approved the high school's traditional senior class trip to Washington in the spring—if the class can solve the problem of racial discrimination.

The action was taken following a report by E. Leonard Caum, high school principal, who said that the Roger Smith Hotel in the capital claims to have no objections to mixed groups during the spring tourist season, provided the students themselves show no discrimination.

However, the problem of discrimination on buses and in theaters and restaurants still outrules the possibility of the trip.

As a second choice, Caum said, the seniors have chosen New York City for their journey, with Boston and Harrisburg following in order of preference.

Permission also was granted to

TIGHTENING UP

Figures reflecting the operations of the International Monetary Fund seem to show clearly that the United States is justified in asking that it change its ways. The agency obviously hasn't been limiting itself to what it was supposed to do.

During the last three years the fund has advanced $737,000,000 to member nations. Of that total, less than $2,500,000 has been repaid. That is certainly not an encouraging record. The IMF was designed to provide a pool on which member nations could draw when they were temporarily in need of the means for stabilizing their currencies. These drafts have not been paid back promptly.

It develops that the fund has been providing dollar aid for its members on what has turned out to be a long-term basis. As the United States supplied the initiative that brought the situation into being, and most of its resources as well, Washington certainly should demur.

Only 49 per cent of the dollars put into the pool by this country are still there. More than half of the total has been handed out in three years. There is ample reason to fear that it will be all gone by 1952, the year the Marshall Plan is supposed to end, unless borrowers are required to repay loans within a time limit.

That is why the United States wants the fund to tighten up its practices. But there may be another reason, too. European nations receiving Marshall Plan money have made little progress toward putting Paul Hoffman's recent advice into effect. The economic unity he spoke for Europe is still far away.

Perhaps Washington's reminder on IMF policy is meant to be a hint that this country wants results.

DRINKING AND DRIVING

At the annual meeting of the American Automobile Association in Cleveland a few days ago, great concern was expressed because of the thousands of automobile accidents that are caused by drunken boys and girls.

"This practice of driving while intoxicated is increasing among youngsters," said President Lou E. Holland. "Many think it is a mark of distinction to carry booze bottles. When they get to drinking and driving, many are turned into potential killers."

More than half the states allow gasoline stations to sell whisky, thus mixing liquor and gasoline. There is also an increase in roadside places where boys and girls may buy liquor.

Unless this abuse is controlled, America is warned that accident records will rise to undreamed of totals. The record is far too black as it stands.

Speaking of women's greater efficiency, where is the man who can handle a fall cold with a four-inch lacy handkerchief?

Military Alliance Has Had Rough Sledding In Europe

The spot air support.

To those strategists who insist Russia's 300 divisions would require from three weeks to a month to march to the English Channel, and that by then American bombs and Allied troops would be on the way, the French have a cold answer.

They well recall that against the combined might of France, England, Belgium and Holland, 17 divisions of Hitler's army—spear-headed by aircraft of the Luftwaffe which swept the skies of Europe of every Allied warplane—smashed from the Rhine to the English Channel in a staggering eleven days in 1940.

France is generally prepared to support the thesis of Western military alliance but the average Frenchman is anxious to make sure the air forces will be present on French soil to defend that alliance should M-Day ever come. Otherwise, he fears, they might never arrive at all before the war would be over for France.

Announcement of Russia's possession of atomic energy has, however, speeded the plan in spite of the doubts and the questions which are yet to be solved.

The French have agreed to standardize their fighter defense with the British, the two settling on the Vampire and Meteor jets as their common air defense force. To this, the French hope ultimately to add U. S. fighter and fighter-bomber units to be supplied by America and flown and maintained by the French.

There has been standardization of other equipment, of air and land battle procedures and a more harmonious relationship between the combined staffs has been reported.

Essentially, however, the problem continues to be one of regional controls, areas of defense authority and individual nationalism versus the common requirement of all countries in Western Europe for an assured means of withstanding atomic and other assault.

This would pre-suppose a working staff, a positive war plan and a source of ground troops. So far, there is no determined working staff; no positive war plan agreed upon by all parties to the alliance. And the source of ground troops—France—has been reluctant to positively commit herself to any program in which the French themselves would have to forfeit all command controls.

But far overshadowing those considerations, in the eyes of impartial observers in Paris, is the fact that nationalism continues to dominate the alliance in the face of a potential enemy and a weapon which recognizes no nationalities and no national boundaries.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

His Murder Postponed

Washington, Nov. 19.

IT IS interesting—and perhaps not without significance—to note that the grandiose and not altogether secret dream which our leading labor politicians entertained concerning the political murder of Senator Robert A. Taft, which they had plotted for next year, has been busted, as they say in certain circles, "higher than Gilroy's kite."

AS NOW viewed, it seems a particularly silly conception and the journalistic gentlemen to whom it was sold are running away from it as fast as they can, willing, not to say anxious, to forget all about it. The idea, it will be recalled, was that those now in charge of the political policies of the CIO, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods are exceedingly smart fellows, indeed. In this planned murder of Senator Taft they were, it was said, for the first time exhibiting real intelligence, playing the role of "labor statesmen" instead of behaving like amateur political huns who do not know the score.

FOR one thing, instead of operating separately to achieve the extinction of Mr. Taft, they had formed a combination which was working with a smooth effectiveness not known before in the labor field. For another, with the aid of Mr. Truman, they would take over the Democratic party in Ohio as the instrument best designed for their purposes. For a third, under labor direction they had worked out a beautiful scheme by which Ohio, the labor forces would be amalgamated with the farmers, the Negroes and the Democratic organizations in the cities. This not only would be sufficient to make a political corpse of Mr. Taft but would be the first step toward the emergence of a genuine American Labor party along the lines of the British Labor party. Eventually, this American Labor party would take over the country. This was the dream which entranced not only the more ardent of the "liberal" columnists but various members of that vague and flimsy organization, Americans for Democratic Action.

OF COURSE, there was nothing new about the proposed combination. It has been a left-wing idea for years. One of its most earnest and eloquent advocates was Prof. Rexford C. Tugwell, who, as far back as 1935, went around the country exhorting along these lines. These were the elements to which the New Deal and the late Mr. Roosevelt so successfully appealed. But what Mr. Roosevelt with the Federal patronage, unlimited Federal funds and pictures of the "more abundant life" for everybody was able to do is a great deal harder for these labor politicians, smart as they are said to be, in their vindictive campaign to murder Mr. Taft.

ANYHOW, even before they could line their combination up or set their dream adequately presented, it blew up. There were several reasons. One was inability to get a man to run against Mr. Taft strong enough to stand a chance. When Governor Lausche first declined weeks ago, they centered behind

Mr. Murray Lincoln, long identified with Ohio agricultural interests and holding a position in one of the farm organizations. The CIO publicists proceeded to give Mr. Lincoln quite a buildup. He was depicted as a noble fellow who could weld the labor, farm, Negro and machine vote into one irresistible force. But somehow the smart labor politicians overlooked one or two rather important points. One of these was that Mr. Lincoln had no desire to run—in fact, seemed determined to hold on to his well-paid post rather than relinquish it for a fight he might easily lose. Another was that two city Democrats, described by CIO publicity agents as "organization hacks" showed extreme unwillingness to pull out of the Democratic primaries for Mr. Lincoln or anyone else. For this unwillingness, the supporting "liberal" columnists blamed a lack of enthusiasm upon the part of Mr. Truman to cooperate in making the dream come true.

IN ADDITION, the new by-laws were accepted. It has been the custom of the company to elect directors every year, but the new by-laws call for the election of two trustees for three years, two for two years and two for one year.

Alvin Hartley and Samuel Cohen were elected into membership.

Candidates were selected as follows: President, Seth Worthington, Robert Wood and Richard Krammer; vice president, Sidney Painter, Jr., and Harvey Gash; secretary, Joseph H. Penrose; treasurer, Irvin L. MacNair, Franklin Gettemer, David Volger and Alvah L. Clarence.

Corresponding secretary, Nelson Calhoun; chief, Wharton Sharp;

INSTEAD, an effort is being made to push the Taft-Hartley Act aside as the main issue and charge that Mr. Taft is "preaching McCormick isolationism all over Ohio" which is not true. Apparently this is acknowledgment that Mr. Taft cannot be killed off because of the labor-leader edict that he must die. If he is going to be murdered, another issue is needed—and more help.

Right now the isolationism issue is being put to the front by the labor politicians in charge of the job. Later on, other attacks are sure to be made. Three things seem clear: (1) that Mr. Taft is a far tougher man in a fight than his opponents believed; (2) that his political murder, as plotted by the smart labor politicians, has been postponed; (3) that these smart labor politicians are not nearly as smart as they are advertised.

A Good Foot Care Program

Courtesy Shulton

After bathing, and before putting on shoes and stockings, sprinkle feet with fragrant bath powder. Put a little in shoes, too, to absorb moisture.

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO you walk in beauty like the night or do you hobble around in tight shoes which cause the toes to twinge, the soles of your feet to burn? Do you use your head when buying shoes?

Few women have their little feet properly shod. The main idea is to find fancy casings that will make the trotters look small and nifty. But what about comfort? If you don't look comfortable you can't look attractive and that's a fact.

Make an effort to find the correct last, the style of shoe that conforms to the contour of your foot, and see to it that it has a flexible leather sole that will provide easy movement. When your feet hurt, you hurt all over. You feel like snarling if anybody looks at you. Fess up, isn't it true? Even an earth angel will get a curdled disposition if her shoes are too short or too narrow.

Pumice Stone

Give your feet the hygienic care to which they are entitled. When having your bath scrub your hoofs with a rich lather and a heavy brush. The friction will hustle up circulation. Have a toilet pumice stone to use on the back of your heels where the top of the shoe often rubs, causes the skin to thicken. The stone can also be used on calloused spots that come on the outer side of the big toe. Of course if your shoes were right you wouldn't have these pedal griefs.

A vigorous massage with mineral oil will help the feet if you have been doing a good deal of walking or standing for some hours. Treat each toe separately. Smooth the oil along the sole and over the heel. Clasp your fingers under your foot, rub from toes to ankle with your thumbs, pressing into the flesh. The oil will soften corns that may be forming.

After your tub, sprinkle feet with fragrant bath powder. Use it with light friction. Sprinkle it in your shoes. It will absorb moisture. If your feet are inclined to perspire, rinse your stockings in water in which boric acid has been dissolved.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

STEAK, a perennial signpost on the road to good living, never seems to lose popularity with the American public. Though the manner of serving this savory dish seldom varies, a little imagination used in its preparation will go a long way toward insuring your family's enjoyment of this meal.

A fine example of this variety is contained in the A & P Service for Homemakers recipe for a Sunday dinner featuring sour cream Swiss steak. Properly prepared, this dish is certain to win praise, both for its flavor and unusual ingredients.

Several pounds of thick round steak form the basis for this meal. The amount can be increased or lessened according to the family's size and appetite. Have on hand two tablespoons of chopped onion, one-third of a cup of flour, one-quarter of a cup of fat, one and one-half teaspoons of salt, one cup of sour cream, and a small quantity of pepper.

Wipe the meat, place it on a meat board and beat flour into it until it will hold no more. Then sear meat well in a heavy frying pan in which there is one-fourth of a cup of fat. Before searing the meat, however, brown the onion, and about half an hour before meat is cooked, add it to the meat.

Add one-half cup of sour cream, cover frying pan and simmer slowly for an hour, then add remaining cream. If necessary, a small quantity of hot water should be added. Add seasonings and continue cooking for a half hour, or until tender. Serve with whipped potatoes and green beans.

Carrying out the Tyrolean touch for this meal, a dessert of Snow Peaks, with appropriate beverages, should keep your family happy long after leaving the table.

Money Not the Secret of Chic

Universal-International

A simple blouse, such as this one of white jersey, is always in good taste, says Movie Star Marta Toren. Wear with matching or contrasting skirt.

By HELEN FOLLETT

MANY girls have an idea that, with a big fat balance in the check book, they could be a lady of fashion. Money helps, no doubt about it. It's nice to have around the house at any time. Yet there are women who fling money like crazy, have more frocks than they can wear and an array of hats big enough to start a store, but they always look dowdy. They do not make the grade. You can guess the reasons—they lack good taste and do not give enough attention to grooming.

With a flare for clothes any woman can pick up some good buys these days. The smart one will seek simple designs in millinery as well as frocks and coats. A well cut dress of good material, with almost no ornamentation at all will outclass the fussy over-decorated one every time. A neat belt and some costume jewelry and the wearer rates high.

Little Things Count

And don't forget that the little things count! A bit of powder fog along the neckline is fatal to appearance, telling the observer that a girl is not fastidious. Twisted stocking seams sound a sour note in the composition of appearance. And how about women who open up a bag that is full of junk and pull out a handkerchief that is not strictly fresh from the laundry? Men notice these things. Don't think they don't. And they come to their own conclusions.

It won't do to let small beauty duties slide along from one day to the next. Postponing the shampoo is a mistake. Unless the hair is clean as clean can be the shafts will not have luster, the growth will look sick, waves won't stay put.

Nail polish that has started to go patchy marks a woman as lacking in appearance duties.

Then there are those all-too-many offenders, girls and women who use the lipstick in a slap-dash manner. Lip borders are ziggy or the teeth have picked up some of the red pigment or the color is too vivid. Plenty of subjects to be kept in mind.

BUTLER — 100 dwelling units, including six one-bedroom units, 88 two-bedroom units, six three-bedroom units, and 28 single car garages; maximum allocation of State funds, $295,000.

ERIE — 210 dwelling units, including 19 one-bedroom units, 170 two-bedroom units, and 21 three-bedroom units; maximum allocation of State funds, $255,000.

JOHNSTOWN — 220 dwelling units, including 40 one-bedroom units, 150 two-bedroom units, and 30 three-bedroom units; maximum allocation of State funds, $635,891.

"The allocation of State funds indicated for each project is maximum which can be granted," Secretary Roosevelt said. "The grant to any project cannot exceed 35 per cent of the estimated or actual preconstruction cost, which ever is lower; but the Board anticipates bids for grants of less than 35 per cent."

The award, he said, will be made to the qualified bidder who stipulates "the lowest average net rental per housing unit" but the Planning Board, under the law, will determine whether the net rentals proposed and the amount of State subsidy required per housing unit "are in accord with the objectives and requirements of the program." The board also reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Not later than December 5, each proposed bidder must submit to the Planning Board information concerning the proposed site, as well as site plans, construction plans and specifications; and approval of these by the Board must be obtained before submission of a bid.

Bids also are required to be based upon operation and maintenance of the housing project for a period of 25 years, to be computed from the date of execution of the contract with the bidder.

The rally will be held from 6.30 to 7.30 p. m. on the eve of the game in front of the high school. A bonfire, following a parade through the borough, will light-high the rally. The board approved the request provided that representatives of the Morrisville Fire Department supervise the bonfire.

Leonard Ferry, president of the board, commended the Morrisville Business Men's Association's plan for a Christmas party for elementary pupils, and the board approved a plan by Manohar Reiter, superintendent of schools, to dismiss high school classes on the afternoon of the party. The action will permit high school teachers to aid in chaperoning the 550 elementary pupils expected to attend the affair.

TIS MAN'S WORLD IN WOMEN'S WEAR SHOP

Stores Catering To Women, Roll Out Carpet For Male Shoppers

ROYAL TREATMENT

By Connie Knauber
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

"Tis a man's world these days, even in a women's wear shop.

The stores which cater only to women's whims have really rolled out the carpet for male Christmas shoppers this year.

The little woman, who has to purchase the presents for everybody in the family but herself, is crossing elbows daily with the best of her sex in the scramble at gift counters.

But her old man, who has to buy only his better half's present, gets royal treatment befitting a sultan.

Five years ago any man who was indiscreet enough to invade a women's shop to buy a gift sneaked up to the nearest counter and bought the first thing he saw.

Nine times out of ten it was the wrong color and wrong size of something his wife didn't want in the first place.

Nowadays, all he has to do is describe his wife to the shop keepers, tell them how much money he wants to spend and let a girl shopper do the rest.

The result will be more pleasing to the Mrs.; she won't have to swap her gift for something else on the day after Christmas, and she doesn't have to know that hubby didn't pick it out himself.

One women's shop, for instance, has organized a club for men shoppers. They may relax in a room labeled "for men only," pile into an easy chair, listen to soft music and appear to be experienced critics as shop girls trot in presents for their approval.

The same store runs an adult version of the letter to Santa Claus. The male shopper gives the store the name of his wife or girl.

The store sends her a card, asking her sizes, favorite color, and a hint of what she'd like to find under her Christmas tree.

She mails the card back to the store, which advises the gentleman on what his little lady expects.

Another store will send a shopper, bearing gift suggestions, to a man's office. He can take his choice without so much as swiveling in his swivel chair.

One swank shop has placed a table full of suggestions just inside its door. This, a spokesman points out, is to avoid embarrassment that comes over a man when he has to plod from counter to counter in a woman's world.

Virtually all of the women's shops and department stores will assign a girl shopper to shop with—or for—Christmas-giving menfolk.

But for really reticent Romeos, one shop offers to assign a gentleman to assist any gentleman who wants to roam among the frills and fancies and make his own choice.

In at least one New York shop, the set-up is even more elaborate. The boys are served cocktails while they wait for pretty girl shoppers to run their gift errands.

This procedure, it might seem, would license an esteemed spouse to get himself a snootful of Christmas cheer, with the perfect alibi that he was just doing a little

Christmas shopping.

But there is still some solace for the little woman who has to battle for gift bargains. She is charged only with the task of buying most of the presents. Pop gets charged with the bills.

ST. ANN'S CAN WIN CROWN IN GAME TOMORROW

St. Ann's A. A. can clinch the championship of the Northeast Football Conference tomorrow as it tackles the Cheltenham A. A. contingent on Memorial Park field. Opening kickoff takes place at two o'clock sharp.

This game was originally scheduled to be played at Cheltenham but was switched to Memorial field to accommodate the local fans as the playoffs of the league will be played in Philadelphia.

St. Ann's is leading the circuit with seven wins and one defeat and is a full game ahead of Ditman and Tacony. These teams are favored to win their games tomorrow and if St. Ann's is beaten, the circuit will end in a three-way tie.

Should the "Saints" win the regular season championship, it will repeat its performance of 1946. It won the seasonal crown that year but was eliminated in the playoffs by Bridesburg. In 1947 and 1948, St. Ann's was not a member of the Northeast Conference.

Coaches Peter Bornice, Joseph Roe, and Salvatore Seneca held four practice sessions this week and are now satisfied with the working of the plays. Against Norristown last Sunday, St. Ann's had a great let-down, not appearing to know its plays, nor blocking, and playing listless ball.

The St. Ann's coaches drilled their players hard and the only setback they will have in tomorrow's tilt is the fact that Leo Fiorelli may have to sit out the game. Fiorelli injured his leg against Norristown and it is still a question mark as to whether he will don a uniform.

Even if Fiorelli is in uniform, the St. Ann's coaches may not use him unless absolutely necessary. They do not wish to risk further injury that may bench the star backfield ace for the playoff games.

Coach Bornice announced last night that his starting backfield will be composed of Joe Elmer, Joe Japoli, John Antoni, and Bill Marlon. This will be Elmer's first starting job since he was injured against Willow Grove several weeks ago. Elmer missed the Tacony game, the only tilt in which St. Ann's was beaten.

Because of the outstanding play of the linemen, Bornice is having a problem as to whom he will start, but indications point to the ends being Stan Lelinski and Howard Keys; tackles, Al Sozio and Luke Wade; guards, Buck Proffy and Buster Monachello, and center, "Mickey" Iannucci.

Cheltenham's record is two wins and six defeats.

A Forum On Human Relations

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

CHILDREN like to talk with older persons, when the emotional setting is just right, about ways of winning and keeping friends. Some months ago I conducted a forum on this subject with about a hundred boys and girls of the seventh and eighth grades. A stenographer recorded the questions and my answers, a few of which appear below.

Q. (girl) If you tried everything in your power to get a person to like you but she ignored you still, what would you do?

A. I would try not to be an annoyance to her, but I would not give up easily. I would study her and myself and try to make myself by and by more acceptable to her. It might take many weeks and months to accomplish this. In the meanwhile I would also cultivate friends among others of my age. My booklet, "Learning To Be Likable" might help you (I told her how and where she might get a copy).

Q. (boy) If you were an all-A student how could you get other students to like you still?

A. I'd never talk about my good grades or other person's grades. I'd never hold up a paper in class with a good grade on it so others could see this grade. I'd cultivate interests and skills which others have and enjoy, and try to be enthusiastic over the achievements of other pupils, not related to book success.

If Someone Falls

Q. (boy) If you happen to see someone fall and hurt himself and you laugh but try not to, what should you do?

A. Apologize and ask if he were hurt. Then resolve to have yourself under better control in the future.

Q. (boy) If two boys were walking down the street and one says, "Do you like Jim?" What should say?

A. "Of course I do." Then try to change the conversation away from discussing persons.

Q. (girl) If you are in a group of students, and someone makes a remark about somebody else and everyone starts taking sides, what should you do?

A. Say nothing unless you can honestly say something good about this person. Try to divert the conversation away from discussion of persons. Picking apart another person who is not present is a low type of conversation too childish for one who is growing up intelligently to engage in. Besides it puts ugliness into the gossipers.

Q. (girl) What if you make good grades and your best friend doesn't make such good grades, but you both like to discuss your grades.

A. The chances are that only you really like to discuss the grades. The friend appears to like to do so to please you. It would be selfish of you ever to bring up the subject and not to try always to change the conversation when some other persons bring this matter up. When with that friend, often talk about some of the ways in which she excels.

Sense of Humor

Q. (boy) If you had a friend who could not take a joke how might you help him to take a joke in the future?

A. By being sure you set him a good example yourself, and by complimenting him as you see him gaining a bit in this direction. You also might take note of the kind of jokes he must endure from among your friends and whether they tend "to gang" up on him. If you find them unfair to him you might tactfully call this matter to their attention.

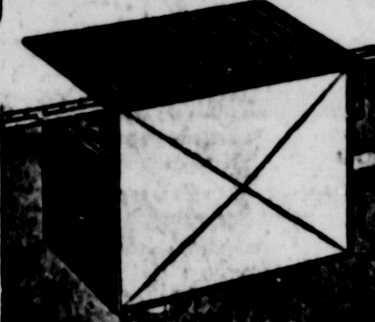

Q. (boy) If you were walking past a group of pupils and you heard a remark about yourself, should you overlook it?

A. Of course.
